LEARNING THE HERBICIDE LESSON!

Western Australia are the leaders in herbicide resistance. Not something to be proud of, however, the attitude of farmers to beat the increasing problem is. As a result farmers from throughout the nation have visited over the last few months to learn our lessons and hopefully not make the same mistakes. Who better to teach them than our Liebe members who are already managing their systems with a sustainable approach.

13 members from Birchip Cropping Group in Victoria recently spent two days in our area on their week long 'radish tour' of WA. While here the group visited our Long term Soil Biology Trial. The 11 year old site investigates the effect of different practices including to build carbon. Our current Australian Government's Action on the Ground project is utilizing the site to focus on innovative carbon storage and nitrogen management strategies in WA.

The next week saw a mix of 28, mainly growers and agronomists from central New South Wales visit Gary Butcher to check out the farm machinery and hear about our farming systems then lunch and a chat with Merrie Carlshausen around succession planning and strategic planning for your farming business.
